Southwestern, Madison go virtual amid staff shortages

BY COLLIN OVERTON

A shortage of substitute teachers and rising COVID-19 numbers in Jefferson County is forcing the Southwestern Jefferson County School Corporation to shift to virtual learning from Thursday, Nov. 12 to Monday, Nov. 30, the school corporation announced Tuesday.

Coronavirus cases have roughly doubled in the span of a month in Jefferson County, pushing the county and surrounding areas into the orange on the Indiana State Department of Health map while the rest of the country now has more than 10 million cases overall. With COVID-19 reporting at an all-time high, contact with the virus has become almost inevitable, especially for school teachers.

At a Board of School Trustees meeting Tuesday night, Southwestern Superintendent Jeff Bates said three staff members and roughly half a dozen students had recently tested positive for the virus. But the biggest problem for the district is that several teachers are currently

Milton riverfront home a total loss in fire

Milton Fire and Rescue and several other fire departments spent much of Tuesday and into early Wednesday morning battling a raging structure fire that destroyed a residence on KY 36 in Milton.

Milton Fire Chief Jason Long said he was heading down Milton Hill at about 1:30 p.m. Tuesday when he got a call from someone driving by the residence who and reported smoke and flames coming from the building. Long contacted the dispatch to issue a call out and arrived at the scene about a minute later to find the two-story residence well engulfed in flames.

The owner, Justin Hiott of Indianapolis, was not home, Long said. He said the house, which overlooks the Ohio River with river access, is a vacation home for Hiott and his family and that quarantined due to close contact and another handful are waiting on their test results, making it impossible for Southwestern to find enough subs to fill the open positions.

Bates said Southwestern usually has about eight who sub consistently, and that number is closer to four when taking into account subs who work other jobs or aren't working due to the risk of infection.

"With COVID and everything you can't really blame them for not wanting to be around a bunch of people," Bates said.

The district was hit hard by contact tracing early in the school year, having to send groups of 30-40 students home at a time due to exposure with positive individuals. That has since calmed down so now the biggest problem is replacing staff, he said.

"We've been fairly lucky as far as the number of cases, but now that it's kind of hit the staff, that's our downfall," he said.

Administrators met Tuesday morning to decide on a solution to staff absences after an already stressful year in which Southwestern has had to combine classes, move teachers around and put principals in the classroom for teachers awaiting test results. Bates said these adaptations were starting to undermine the district's entire strategy of minimizing contact with multiple groups in the case of one student or teacher having the virus.

The district plans on continuing its free meal service for students, with pickup scheduled for Thursday and Friday at the high school cafeteria and the option of delivery available Monday through the rest of the virtual learning period.

As for how classes will be taught, the model students will use Thursday and Friday will be similar to the eLearning they used over fall break, but starting Monday, teachers will be streaming classes live, Bates said.

Mayor self-quarantining; Holcomb reinstates state crowd restrictions

BY COURIER STAFF

Mayor Bob Courtney will be out of Madison City Hall the next two weeks as he self-quarantines at home for the next 14 days after his wife, Tammy, recently tested positive for COVID-19.

The mayor has tested negative and is experiencing no symptoms, but will follow Centers for Disease Control and Prevention protocols for those who feel healthy but have been in close contact with someone with COVID-19.

"The safety of our community is important to my team at City Hall and me. I will continue to work from home during this time and plan to self-monitor for symptoms," Courtney said in a prepared statement. "I appreciate all the efforts being made by city employees to continue to provide essential city services to the residents of Madison. This is a further reminder of the risk the virus presents, especially to our healthcare providers like Tammy, who is an intensive care nurse."

At this time, no other city employees have been notified of exposure. The city continually evaluates the protocols in place as set forth by the CDC, Gov. Eric Holcomb, and the Jefferson County Health Department to best protect the health and safety of employees and the community.

The mayor's statement reminded local residents "if you are feeling sick or exhibiting any signs of COVID-19, you should stay home and contact your healthcare provider for instructions."

Meanwhile, on Wednesday Holcomb issued an executive order reinstating tighter crowd gathering limits for some counties — including Jefferson — starting this weekend. Crowds in Jefferson County will be limited to 50 people with social distancing and masks. The new order will also limit capacity at K-12 sports and extracurricular events.

Madison Consolidated High School is facing similar problems. On Sunday night, Madison Consolidated schools announced the high school would use a virtual learning day due to a lack of subs amid staff testing positive for the virus or calling in for other reasons. The district followed up on Monday afternoon with a plan for MCHS to use virtual learning throughout the rest of the week on a "red/white" schedule.

Students enrolled in dual-credit classes at Ivy Tech Community College are still reporting to classes at their normal times. Extracurriculars and athletic events are also still proceeding throughout the week, since the decision was rooted in staff absences, not student illnesses, Madison's announcement read.

Madison Superintendent Jeff Studebaker sent a letter to families Monday noting the school's COVID strategy was working well and asking for their cooperation in wearing face coverings, washing hands and limiting contact to small groups outside school hours.

"From the beginning of the school year, we knew that if we had staff out for any reason (scheduled professional development, personal day, non-COVID related illness, or medical reason) that would be complicated by any precautionary quarantine situation," Studebaker said.

"We realized early on that this would make us more vulnerable to a potential closing as we are extremely short on available substitute teachers. While each year we struggle to find subs, the conditions around COVID-19 have made this year a particularly challenging climate for finding any type of additional personnel."

He added that Madison is evaluating its entire virtual program to assess best practices, areas for improvement and overall student success. But due to how close the district is to the end of the semester and the fact that its COVID data is still solid, administrators don't plan on switching their strategy just yet.

However, Madison will announce enrollment options for the second semester in the coming days should families want to switch their children to virtual learning after winter break, Studebaker said.

In other business at Southwestern, the board:

— Ratified the 2020-2021 tentative agreement with teachers making a number of changes. Returning teachers will receive a one-time stipend of $750, except for two middle/high school teachers who started in January of 2020. Those teachers will receive a $375 one-time stipend.

The district also adopted a new salary scale ranging from $36,500 to $68,500 and agreed to pay $250 more toward employee health insurance if those employees are on the school insurance plan. Southwestern will now pay $7,000 toward a single plan and $8,250 toward a family plan.

The school corporation will also pay a one-time check of $50 per accumulated sick day — up to a max of 150 sick days — for any teacher retiring from Southwestern.

— Approved a $6,300 purchase from Metalite Corporation to replace a broken forklift.

— Awarded a $258,524.78 bid to Alfred L Schiller Hardware for locks to re-key and secure doors in the school corporation. A $267,000 from grant from the state is helping to cover the cost, Safety Specialist and Middle School Principal Jason Watson said.

FIRE

Hiott had only owned the property about 30 days.

The only person who was inside the house at the time of the fire was a painter Hiott had hired. He later told firefighters that he left the house immediately after smelling smoke and seeing the flames.

Like most homes close to the riverbank and in the flood plain, the residence is two-stories — a concrete first-story that housed a boat, two jet skis, a tractor and other belongings and a second level residence with wood paneling on the exterior. Long said both levels were a total loss in the fire.

Firefighters from several local departments battled a two-story structure fire overlooking the Ohio River on KY 36 in Milton. High winds and the materials and design of the home kept firefighters occupied from 1:30 p.m. Tuesday to 4:30 a.m. Wednesday. There were no injuries, but the home was a total loss.

The home was still salvageable by the time Long got to the scene, but high winds and the wood-panel construction on the exterior helped push flames throughout the building, Long said. Bedford Volunteer Fire and Rescue, Madison Township Fire Department, Fair Play Fire Company No. 1 and Westside Volunteer Fire Department out of Carroll County all arrived to assist.

Long said he was unable to confirm a cause for the blaze, but dashcam videos and photos taken at the scene more than likely indicate "something electrical in nature" near the main entrance to the second floor residence.

Wind continued to hinder firefighters' efforts to control the blaze as gusts would fan flames into new areas of the house, keeping firefighters occupied throughout the afternoon and evening. It was about 4:30 a.m. Wednesday before Milton firefighters were able to leave the scene, Long said. He was back at the property Wednesday afternoon to monitor for hotspots that continued to rekindle at the site.

"We'll be here on and off all day if this thing doesn't stop. It's just everything is piled on top of each other; we don't have any access to get underneath it — it's just a matter of spraying and waiting," Long said.

JERRY KING

KING

Mom's family is from the Switzerland County area.

"I grew up playing drums in church bands, but eventually I felt the call to write music, so I picked up a guitar. In 2003 I formed the band Jerry King & the Rivertown Ramblers, mostly with guys from up in the Cincinnati area. I chose the stage name King to honor King Records, plus it has that Carl Perkins, rockabilly ring to it.

"Now you have to remember 2003 was just after a big resurgence in rockabilly music, with Brian Setzer and the Stray Cats, The Squirrel Nut Zippers and others. Our sound fit right into all that energy. Before the decade was out we played all these rockabilly revival festivals in Indy, Green Bay, Winston-Salem, Vegas, even Barcelona, Spain.

"To go along with the touring, we put out five albums on CD and a vinyl record. We were never what you'd call full-time musicians, but we were close. We were super busy, but most of us still had day jobs.

"Speaking of day jobs, around 2010 I got an opportunity for employment down in Texas. And my teenage son Chris had this good friend Anthony Ray Wright who asked if he could come with us. We went down there for six years and Anthony and Chris both really came into their own musical styles, playing over in Austin and all over west Texas.

"When we moved back from Texas to the Vevay area I got the Rivertown Ramblers going again, and Anthony and Chris and I started doing gigs as the Falls City Boys. Before COVID we were playing quite a bit around the region, at venues like Southgate House over in Newport and the Rambling House up in Columbus, Ohio.

"If you've been to our Falls City Boys shows, you've probably seen the Johnny Cash set I do. That's a funny story actually. I was playing with this Johnny Cash tribute band years ago and the lead singer had to back out. The promoter was desperate, trying to find a replacement. I told him I could give it a try, and I ended up doing a whole bunch of shows. I can do a pretty solid Roy Orbison tribute too!

"Basically the Rivertown Ramblers is the outlet for our original songs, and the Falls City Boys is more oriented to cover tunes. Not every audience is receptive to original stuff. But I will say this, Madison is exceptional in that regard. The music fans here truly appreciate original music, and they pay attention. They listen. You don't get that everywhere you go.

"The music scene here in Madison has evolved a lot since 2005 when Joey G ran his bar and brought so much great music to town. We played there many times in those early years. But I think the scene is more mature now, and the music fans are more sophisticated. We can probably thank Joey for a lot of that."

You can see Jerry King & The Rivertown Ramblers Saturday at Red Bicycle Hall, along with the Anthony Ray Wright Band.

Nutley reaches 1,000 points in Madison loss

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

Madison saw a chance at victory go by the wayside in the waning seconds and Lawrenceburg ruined Jade Nutley's big night by escaping with a 41-38 win in girls basketball on Thursday.

Nutley became the just the eighth player in Madison girls basketball history to eclipse the 1,000-point career scoring mark with an easy layup late in the third quarter. But 45 minutes after that accomplishment, Lawrenceburg was celebrating a win and the Cubs were left scratching their heads after a second straight loss to start the season.

Madison coach Sonja Bowyer saw improvement over the season opener at Charlestown on Saturday but she still noted that there is a lot of work to do.

"I thought we played better than we did on Saturday. I think our sophomores are still learning and they're a little bit shorter which makes it tough. They were in the position they needed to be in but they're never going to get an over the back call of they don't push out," Bowyer said. "I thought we played harder than Lawrenceburg; they're an athletic team and I thought we handled the press well. But now we've got to work on in-the-game situations. We had some opportunities that didn't pan out. We learned a lot from this game."

Unlike Saturday's loss, Madison played from out front for most of the first half, giving up the lead only in the final seconds of the second quarter to trail 20-19 at halftime.

The Cubs (0-2) dominated the third quarter with their best stretch of the season, a 12-0 run that allowed them to build a 33-26 lead with just over a minute left in the frame. It was during that stretch that Nutley reached the 1,000-point mark on a driving layup with 2:14 to go that gave Madison the lead.

The game was stopped at that point and a jubilant Nutley hugged teammates and coaches and received flowers, a ball and shirt for her accomplishment. She said that she was just happy to get a chance to reach the mark, considering that Madison went to virtual classes this week due to COVID-19.

David Campbell

Madison's Jade Nutley (middle) gets a congratulatory hug from teammate Taylor Lynch after scoring her 1,000th-career point on Tuesday.

"I've been nervous, worried that I wouldn't get it. I wasn't even sure we'd make it to Friday," Nutley said. "I was super dependent upon tonight and I was just super happy when it happened. I thought about it all day today and it made me a nervous wreck. Once the game started, I just forgot about everything."

Nutley needed only 13 points coming into the game and had 10 at halftime. A short jumper pushed her to 999 and she went over the mark on the next possession.

"I wasn't sure how many I needed and then when I came out at half, all of the students yelled 'You only need three!' " Nutley laughed. "Every time I got the ball, they were yelling 'shoot!' It was fun."

"She works hard for every single point. I'm just glad that with all of this craziness going on that we were able to get this game in," Bowyer said. "She definitely deserves it. I know she would have liked to have gotten that 'W' but there are many more to come."

Nutley followed her milestone with another basket and Daesja Jay hit a 3-pointer as the Cubs built their biggest cushion of the night at 33-26 with 1:04 left in third. Lawrenceburg then began to chip away, finally tying the game at 38-38 on a Kristin Roark basket with 3:01 to play.

Madison managed just four points in the fourth quarter when, like on Saturday, the offense went quiet. Still, the Cubs had a chance to win, trailing 39-38 with less than 30 seconds to go. But Taylor Lynch's off-balance shot went wide and Nutley was forced to spend her fifth foul to stop the clock with four seconds to go. Kirsten Cross hit two free throws as the Tigers iced the win.

For the second-straight week, Madison struggled offensively, shooting just 30% (13-for-43) while committing 20 turnovers. Senior Lundun Perry missed the game with an illness while sophomore Casey Dyer was forced to quarantine starting on Tuesday. Nutley scored 17 points and had six rebounds but Jay and Cameran Cahall were the next on the scoring list with seven. Lynch had four points, 10 rebounds and six assist.

Cross and Kierah Lowe scored 10 points each for Lawrenceburg (2-0) with Lowe also pulling down 10 rebounds.

Madison returns to action on Friday when it travels to Switzerland County. The varsity-only game begins at 7 p.m.

SWIM PREVIEW

Area swimmers ready for exciting season

BY DAVID CAMPBELL

There are plenty of reasons for excitement with plenty of high expectations this year when the high school swim season kicks off on Saturday.

After record-setting seasons a year ago, both Madison and Southwestern have several swimmers who could post special seasons while the Madison boys team is hoping to make its final Hoosier Hills Conference campaign a memorable one.

A look at each of the schools and what to expect this season:

MADISON CUBS

Madison's young boys team turned heads last year and now a veteran squad has its sights squarely on winning conference and sectional titles and sending multiple swimmers to the state finals.

Sophomore Justin Banks, last year's Madison Courier Boys Swimmer of the Year, and junior Carter Schutte lead the talented group which also in includes seniors Trent Schmidt, Luke Bryant and Jacob Caudill, juniors Leighton Wielgoszinski, Nick Whitaker and Jack Kelsey, sophomores Liam Roney, Gavin McMahon, Preston Kuppler and Peyton Ford, and freshman Alex Wang.

"We have big goals for this season for the boys team. We believe we have a shot at winning our conference, bringing home a few sectional titles, and hope to make a trip to the state meet with individual and relay events later in the year," Madison coach Ashley Schutte said. "The majority of these guys swim year round and/or play a fall sport so we feel very confident in their conditioning coming into the season and know they are committed and prepared to put in the work to win."

The Madison girls should also see improvement thanks to experience gained last year and an influx of new young talent. Seniors Katie Royce and Autumn Hedgepeth return with junior Trinity Stoner, sophomores Callie Anderson, Alyssa Storm, Emily Nay, and Andie Royce-Miller. New team members include freshmen include Libby Bronkella and Kailee Lock, juniors Isabel Wilber, and Spanish foreign exchange student Aitana Gabaldon Perez, and senior Brett Cahall.

"Our kids have done an outstanding job of being ambassadors for our sport and have recruited several new faces to our team," Schutte said. "We couldn't be happier to have doubled the size of our team with new swimmers and multi-sport athletes."

Madison opens the 2020-21 season at Seymour on Nov. 24. Due to COVID-19 restrictions, seating and admission capacity to swim meets will be restricted to parents and siblings of home athletes only. The school hopes to live stream home meets to its Facebook page @Madison Cubs Swim Team.

SOUTHWESTERN REBELS

Numbers may be low at Southwestern, but what the Rebels lack in quantity, they make up for in quality.

Several Rebels have school record and Ohio River Valley Conference titles firmly in their sights and reaching the state finals is not out of the question.

"We are a small but determined group. We have some really good opportunities to break a few school records this year," Southwestern coach Shelly Anderson said. "We have some talented kids, who depending on the amount of effort they choose to put in, could do some really great things."

Senior Belle Crawford, last year's Madison Courier Girls Swimmer of the Year, already owns school records in the 100 butterfly, 100 backstroke and 200 freestyle relay and is hoping to add the 200 individual medley mark to that list. Junior Julia Worcester wants to add 50 free and 100 free records to her collection while senior Ethan Besse is aiming for the boys 100 backstroke mark.

Other swimmers for the Rebels include seniors Caleb Geary and Andrew Stoner, juniors Audrey Bare and Iago Alfonso Garta, and sophomore Amiah Owen.

Southwestern opens the season on Saturday at New Albany.

SWITZERLAND COUNTY PACERS

Switzerland County coach Eric Cole did not respond to our questionnaire seeking information. However, top returners for the Pacer boys are senior Julio Regueira, juniors Adrian Armstrong and J.W. Goldsberry, and sophomore Nathan Furnish. Top returners for the girls are senior Brooke Johnson and junior Alisha Detmer.

Switzerland opens the season Tuesday, Nov. 17.

Avoiding intimacy due to coronavirus fears

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: My wife and I are in our early 70s. She has had some health problems in the past, so she has been extremely cautious in light of COVID-19. I am very concerned about the virus, too, and want to be careful, but my wife's level of carefulness has been impacting our intimacy. Since the start of the pandemic, she has cut off all physical contact with me — not just sex but also kissing and even hugging.

I do go out often to run errands — grocery shopping, picking up fast-food, going to the bank. I always wear proper masks, which my wife makes for me. I wash my hands frequently. But due to her past health problems, she would prefer to avoid any sort of physical togetherness, to be safe.

I would appreciate your thoughts on this situation, as I am getting a little frustrated! — Waiting in Roanoke

Dear Waiting: Physical touch is important, not just to our mental health but also our physical health. One study from the University of North Carolina found that women who receive hugs from their partner have lower blood pressure and therefore a lower risk of cardiovascular disease. The study authors noted that hugs appeared to stimulate "the thymus gland, which regulates and balances the body's production of white blood cells, which keeps you healthy and disease free."

That's not to say that single folks should recklessly date around in pursuit of a physical partner right now. But in the case of you and your wife, who live together and are both being careful, the benefits of physical intimacy would seem to outweigh the risks.

Talk to your wife about what steps you could take that might make her more comfortable. For example, what if you had groceries and food delivered, rather than going into stores or restaurants, and did all your banking online?

If she's not open to physical touch no matter what precautions you take, it might speak to a deeper anxiety brought on by the pandemic. Respect her boundaries. Offer empathy, emotional support and loving patience. This, too, shall pass.

A friend or more

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

Dear Annie: I'm a senior at university. I'm living with my boyfriend this semester, so we're in the same "family unit" and are able to be around each other without masks and social distancing.

I've been seeing my boyfriend — let's call him Raul — for about a year and a half now. We're getting along rather well, and I can really envision a future together. However, this is the first serious relationship I've been in, and the two of us are most likely going to be in very different places once the academic year is over. Raul's applying to grad schools in Europe, and I'm looking to work for a nonprofit in the United States. Neither of us would feel good about letting the other compromise their plans or ambitions or dreams.

That aside, while I was back home in Vermont during the onset of the pandemic, I got to spend a lot of time with childhood best friend — let's call him Vermont Boy — who just broke up with his girlfriend of three years. I felt that there was a spark between us, but nothing happened over the summer. Vermont Boy and I have been texting every day since. He also has similar interests to mine and wants to stay in the States — in New England, preferably. At one point over the summer, it felt as though we were about to kiss, but I think he held back since he knew I'm in a relationship. I'm glad we didn't kiss, but I also really wish we had.

I feel like the end is near with my boyfriend, but we live together. I feel restless every time I think about Vermont Boy. Things are still going so smoothly and sweetly between me and Raul and, for emphasis, we live together! But there is a sort of bitterness that comes with knowing we have to go our separate ways. What should I do? — At a Crossroads in Romance

Dear At a Crossroads: I don't know if Vermont Boy is the one for you, but I know that Raul is not. Ending things now is the fairest and kindest thing that you can do for him. From there, see where things go with Vermont Boy, but also entertain the possibility of being single. Sometimes, when we can't decide between two things, it's because neither option is right.

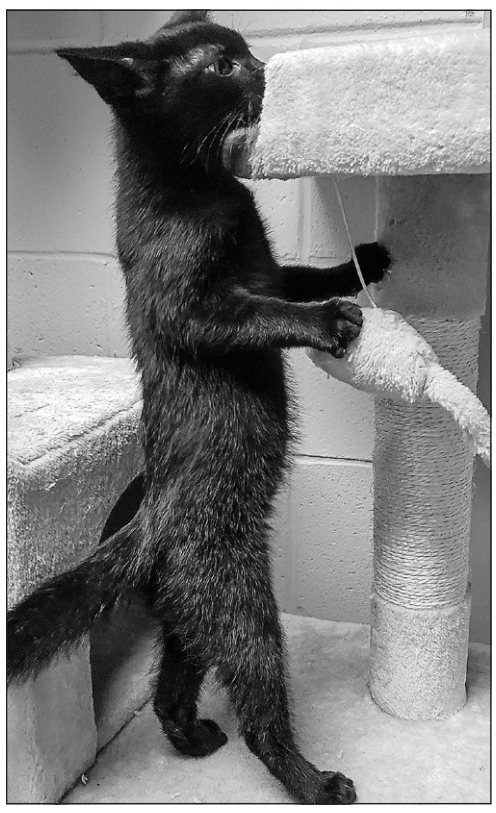
One important caveat: Please take social distancing precautions, such as wearing masks, meeting outside, and maintaining six feet of distance, when seeing anyone new.

Dear Annie: I'm single but wanting a relationship. How does one go about dating in the current climate, with pandemic restrictions in place? — Looking for Mr. Right

Dear Looking: This is not an ideal time to be dating new people, but the reality is that people crave companionship. Dating websites are the main, and perhaps only, way to meet folks at the moment. Many sites offer free basic memberships and affordable premium memberships, such as OkCupid and Plenty of Fish. Try one out.

When you find a promising match, try going on a "virtual date" — e.g., order takeout from the same restaurant, and video chat while you eat it. Eventually, you may decide that you want to try an in-person date. Take the usual precautions of meeting in a safe, public place, along with the pandemic precautions of staying six feet apart, wearing masks and meeting outside. And communicate your safety expectations ahead of time.

PETS OF THE WEEK



BRENT

The Madison-Jefferson County Animal Shelter currently has a number of dogs and cats and kittens available for adoption.

Brent and Brenton are three-month-old brothers that love to play. They will chase each other tackling toys and each other until they wear themselves out and then it's snuggle time. Both siblings are looking for their furever home.

The shelter is currently in need of dry cat food and kitten food. Donations may be left outside of the yellow door at the shelter, 2727 Hannah Drive, Madison, and a staff member will collect them.

The shelter has pictures of additional pets waiting for adoption for viewing at www.sisaveapet.com. The shelter is currently open, but in light of COVID-19, will only take appointments and will not accept walk-in customers.

BRENTON

To request an appointment, email animal.shelter39@jeffersoncounty.in.gov. All cats and kittens are $45 off unless they are already spayed or neutered.

Volunteers are always welcome at the shelter. Individuals must be at least 16 years old to volunteer. Volunteers can help with everyday cleaning, answering phones, and exercising the pets. Contact the shelter for details.

Those with missing pets can call or email a complete description of the pet, when and where it was last seen, the owner's name and contact information, and a picture of the pet. Pets are held for three days before they are made available for adoption. Animals should not be abandoned outside of the shelter or dropped off at the shelter after hours. For animal control issues in Madison, call 812-265-3347. For animal control issues in Hanover and Jefferson County, call 812-265-2648.

WANT TO ADOPT?

To request an appointment, email animal.shelter39@jeffersoncounty.in.gov. All cats and kittens are $45 off unless they are already spayed or neutered.
